

Hong Kong

CHINA

RACHEL READ
Freelance writer, editor
and blogger;
rachtllg.com

If you're only there for a day, one must-do is... to ride the Star Ferry. From the amazing view to the ferry itself, it's a Hong Kong icon in every sense of the word (and super cheap!).
A place in the city that visitors might not be aware of that

I love going to is... Teakha Kitchen, a tranquil café in Shek Tong Tsui (HKU MTR Station) that specialises in tea and it does the best masala chai in Hong Kong.

The best freebie a visitor can get in my city is... a visit to a museum (most are free on Wednesdays). I'd recommend the Museum of Coastal Defence (one of HK's best-kept secrets that's mostly outside, so you can take advantage of some fantastic harbour views alongside the historical wartime structures), the Heritage Museum (which has a great exhibit about kung fu star, Bruce Lee) and the Museum of History (for a historical whistle-stop tour through the city).

The most scenic spot in the city is... Tai O, a serene little fishing village filled with houses on stilts above the water, fish and shrimp paste being left out to dry, and delicious street food stalls – a different, quieter side to Hong Kong that many people forget about.

My favourite street in the city is... the Sai Wan Ho Waterfront for evening strolls and scenic views of the harbour. Also – any street with a wet market on it!